On June 1-3, the Central Bank of Armenia, in partnership with the Reinventing Bretton Woods Committee, hosted the international conference “Can Nations Agree? Macroeconomic Policy in a Non-Cooperative World” in Dilijan.

The conference brought together central bankers, policymakers, academics, and international experts to discuss global economic challenges, monetary and fiscal policy, financial stability, the international monetary system, stablecoins, tokenization, and the prospects for cooperation in an increasingly fragmented world. Opening remarks were delivered by Martin Galstyan, Governor of the Central Bank of Armenia, and Marc Uzan, Director of the Reinventing Bretton Woods Committee. A welcoming keynote was delivered by Vahagn Khachaturyan, President of the Republic of Armenia. Participants included representatives of the IMF, BIS, World Bank, Bank of England, regional central banks, Armenian state institutions, and leading academic and policy centers. The conference served as a platform for exchanging views on the future of macroeconomic policymaking and strengthening international dialogue amid global uncertainty.
