Meetings of the Alliance for Financial Inclusion (AFI) working groups have commenced

On April 7, the meetings of Working Groups on Consumer Empowerment and Market Conduct and Global Standards Proportionality of the Alliance for Financial Inclusion (AFI) kicked off at the Dilijan Research Center of the Central Bank of Armenia.

Lead financial experts from about 80 countries gathered to discuss the prospects for the development of inclusive financial systems. Representatives of central banks and financial regulators will be in Armenia up until April 10 to join their efforts to address urgent issues. The event is an important platform for leading international financial inclusion experts, policymakers and regulators to promote cooperation between inclusive financial systems. International partners highly appreciate Armenia's role in the field of financial inclusion, emphasizing that work with Armenia has always been based on the exchange of experience and the creation of new knowledge.

Issues related to improving consumer protection in financial markets and promoting the proportional application of global standards in developing economies are also among the topics discussed at these meetings.

The working meeting of leading international financial inclusion experts, representatives of the policymakers and regulatory authorities at the Dilijan Research Center is a key step towards the global advancement of inclusive financial systems. Armenia continues to contribute meaningfully by drawing on its own experience and integrating globally recognized best practices.
