2025-10-10

On October 8-10, the Central Bank of Armenia, in cooperation with the Asian Development Bank (ADB), hosted the 2025 Asian Regional Forum on Investment Management of Foreign Exchange Reserves in Dilijan.

The Forum brought together representatives from central banks and international organizations across Asia and beyond to discuss current trends, challenges, and best practices in the management of foreign exchange reserves.

Through thematic discussions and interactive sessions, participants exchanged knowledge and experiences, explored new investment approaches, and identified opportunities for collaboration. The three-day program covered a broad range of topics, including global macro-financial developments and their implications for reserve portfolios, strategic asset allocation and portfolio diversification, liquidity and risk management, sustainable and responsible investment practices, technological innovation and governance in reserve management as well as regional case studies and experiences from central banks.

The Asian Regional Forum on Investment Management of Foreign Exchange Reserves served as an important platform for capacity building and policy dialogue among central banks and reserve-managing institutions.
